Secretary Resigns Following Criticism Of Business Deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Senate Democratic Secretary Robert G. Baker resigned Monday amid increasing public disclosures of his financial interests in business firms, now the subject of an FBI investigation.

The announcement of Baker's resignation from his influential Capitol Hill position was made by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who praised Baker's official performance and said, "I deeply regret the necessity for his resignation.

The 35-year-old former Senate page boy was named to his post in 1955 by Vice President Lyndon Johnson, then the Senate Democratic leader. Baker and his wife both held Senate jobs that brought them a combined annual income of more than $31,000.

Secretary Resigns Following Criticism Of Business Deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Senate Democratic Secretary Robert G. Baker resigned Monday amid increasing public disclosures of his financial interests in business firms, now the subject of an FBI investigation.

The announcement of Baker's resignation from his influential Capitol Hill position was made by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who praised Baker's official performance and said, "I deeply regret the necessity for his resignation.

The 35-year-old former Senate page boy was named to his post in 1955 by Vice President Lyndon Johnson, then the Senate Democratic leader. Baker and his wife both held Senate jobs that brought them a combined annual income of more than $31,000.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Haiti's death toll from hurricane Flora was officially boosted Monday to 2,000 to 4,000 as the storm again scourged neighboring Cuba.

Haitian health minister Girard Philippeaux said 2,000 were counted dead and the figure probably will reach 4,000. Philippeaux said about 100,000 persons were homeless as a result of Flora's 24-hour rampage through Haiti before she jumped the windward passage and entered Cuba Friday.

Previous reports from Haiti had listed Flora's death toll there only as more than 400.

Flora has been pummeling Cuba since then. Her destructive gales and torrential rains have done and torrential rains have done damage mounting toward proportions of economic disaster for Fidel Castro's Caribbean satellite of the Soviet Union.

Burch is chairman of Constitutional Prayer Amendment Inc., an organization he helped form after the U.S. Supreme Court's recent opinion in the Murray case that prayers and Bible readings in Baltimore public schools were unconstitutional

Burch was city solicitor for Baltimore when the case was argued before the high court. A few days after the decision, he announced creation of Constitutional Prayer Amendment Inc., whose purpose is to launch a national drive to wipe out the effect of the Supreme Court decision.

The attorney said about 100 resolutions for a constitutional amendment had been introduced in Congress, but that none has gotten out of committee because of "their great diversity of purposes and contents.

> Frostburg City Police said the man was walking along U. S. Route 40 near the Little Ritz Restaurant on West Main Street when he apparently stepped into the path of an oncoming car.

Authorities said the driver of the car, Ronald L. Thomas, 19, of RD 2, Frostburg, swerved the vehicle but was unable to avoid striking the man.

Sgt. Edward Bevens and Officer Karl Hetz said witnesses reported that Thomas was not driving at an excessive rate of speed and that the victim "walked into the side of the car".

Macmillan The Unflappable

A scant four months ago headlines in the British press declared Prime Minister Harold MacMillan a political martyr.

They reckoned without Macmillan's confidence, shrewdness, and political skill. Also his unwillingness, as he put it himself, to be cast out of office by "a pair of tarts." Indeed, judging by the warm response evidenced in his recent mail, Macmillan seems not to have been hurt personally at all by the Profumo-Ward-Keeler scandal. So he faces the annual convention of his Conservative Party, meeting Wednesday at Blackpool, in quite firm command.

The 13-year Tory rule in Britain is something of a miracle, and the secret of that miracle appears to be the instinct for political survival of Harold Macmillan. Taking over after the fiasco of Suez in 1956, he rebuilt the Conservative forces to win their third successive election in 1959 with an increased Parliamentary majority, a feat unprecedented in British political his-

When the Profumo farrago cracked open last summer, disaster seemed at last to have caught up with the sad-faced man with the wattles and the drooping mustache. Macmillan's administration had been bedeviled by venery slum profiteering, espionage, defection, prostitution, sexual perversion. The economy had been stagnant. Unemployment was chronic. The British press and public appeared fed up.

Now the economic reports are favorable a boomlet appears in the making. And despite rude shocks to the Conservatives in recent byelections, Labor's lead in the Gallup and Daily Express polls has been cut considerably - in the first from 181/2 to 131/2 per cent, in the second from 20 to 141/2 per cent.

Macmillan's government is entitled to stay in office until October 1964. With the Laborites so far out in front, Macmillan would be unwise to call an election this year. But things could change considerably before the autumn of next

A Man In Trouble

When Khrushchev talks to the West, either by himself or through mouthpieces like Gromyko, the words are subject to all sorts of discount. This is why East-West "dialogues" are usually so profitless. But when the boss of the Kremlin talks to his own people the West can really get a clue to what is going on in that mysterious world behind the Iron Curtain.

This column has consistently held that Khrushchev is currently in such trouble internally that it should be the Number One priority of our diplomacy to get concessions from him while the getting is good. Of course, I haven't been to Soviet Russia, and I have doubted in the past that I would be welcome to a visa. So my opinion has little effect on professional Kremlinologists. Mut even without travelling in Russia it is still possible to get a picture of its troubles by putting together Khrushchev's various jollifications, harangues, importunings and diatribes as ne travels about his own empire.

With all respect to the professional Kremlinologists, they are not very good at putting together Khrushchev's own words to his own people. So let's try to paint a perspective-picture based on some recent Khrushchev statements that have been monltored by various eavesdroppers.

The most important Khrushchev statement of recent months was made to the workers in a tractor plant on August 22 in Yugoslivia. "Mass production," so Khrushchev told the Yugoslavs, "will be decisive. The system that produces the most will win. We must outproduce the capitalist countries. We in the Soviet Union can organize on the basis of mass production. Yugoslavia cannot do it. Bulgaria cannot do it. Czechoslovakia cannot do it, nor the Poles. Only the Soviet Union and China can do it. We can organize anything on an assembly-line basis."

What this speech would seem to be saying is that Khrushchev doesn't think his empire is ready for military war, just yet. There is, first, the question of mass production organization to settle. But please, so he seems to be importuning the people of Yugoslavia and the East European satellite countries, please, please, please don't be difficult while the Soviet is busy getfing its assembly lines working.

able of mass production, there isn't any point in exporting Soviet machine tools to Poland or Hungary. Let them patiently raise cabbages and wait.

But when Khrushchev told the Yugoslav workers that the East European nations must leave it to Russia to organize for mass production, he did not mean to imply that he was finding it easy to plan for effective Soviet assembly lines. Talking to a group of industrial managers in Moscow, Khrushchev had already lamented the difficulties he was having in trying to pound sense into his party economic officials. "There was a time." so Khrushchev said, "when the power of a state was measured in terms of the amount of steel it could produce . . . But now, when there are other materials competing with steel, such a criterion is no longer adequate . . . Some planners have put on 'steel blinkers' and now look and act as they were once taught. We now have a material that surpasses steel and costs less, and they still cry 'Steel. Steel!

In other words, Khrushchev was saying that top-down planning of an assembly-line civilization just doesn't get around to solving its problems forehandedly. Wearing their "steel blinkers," the Soviet planners had let the plastics and aluminum technicians and capitalists of the West steal a number of marches on the Russians. So there will be a mad rush in the Soviet Union to catch up in plastics like polypropylene, and in the reduction of bauxite to aluminum ingots.

But how fast can the plastics "catch-up" go when Soviet agriculture demands planning priorities? Speaking to his peasants, Khrushchev recently berated them for not listening to the "growl of thunder." Then he promised them more chemical fertilizers and more irrigation. All this in practically the same sentence in which he admitted the difficulty of solving both the fertilizer problem and the irrigation pipe problem at one and the same time. A picture, indeed, of a dictator in terrible trouble just trying to use his own brains and energy to make up for the nagging deficiencies of his own subjects who persist in letting him down. One of these days Khrushchev might get mad enough to reintroduce capitalism just out of spite.

Is There Any Way Out For China's Rulers?

By Joseph Alsop

HONG KONG. Much too little attention is paid to the central fact in Communist China's present situation. This central fact, far transcending in importance the Sino-Soviet split. is a gigantic and gruesome domes-In 1958, Mao Tse-tung began a super-intensive effort to make China into a military-industrial giant power. The vast program of industrial development was to be paid for in the classical Communist manner, by ruthlessly squeezing the humble, industrious masses in the Chinese countryside.

Within one year, the squeeze had reduced the Chinese peasantry to a condition of misery with no parallel whatever in the Chinese past. By 1961-62, the consequences of the "great leap forward" were so alarming that Chinese Communist leaders hastily ordered a great leap backward.

Thus new factories were left half-finished. Industrial furnaces were banked all over China. Capital investment was now condemned as a bad thing. And the relaxation of the squeeze on the countryside produced the slight improvement of conditions in the villages that is now observable. It is necessary to insist upon these facts, because they are the main elements of what has been called China's "no exit situation." The Sino-Soviet split is only a very minor contributing factor as yet. although it may later become a major factor when the Sovietprovided higher weapons of the armed forces and the Soviet and Eastern European factory machines that are still in use inevitably begin to wear out and break down with no replacements in

The question is whether the present Chinese leadership can find a way out of their "no exit situation" One way out, obviously, is to change the ratio of population to resources by reducing the population. A birth control propaganda campaign is in fact in progress, with little likelihood of much result.

To be sure, there are good reasons to doubt the wisdom of unthinkingly cranking an annual, automatic Chinese population increase into every calculation concerning China. The arguments for assuming continuous population growth are about as good as the late, lamented arguments for assuming, last year, that the Soviets would "never" put offensive missiles in Cuba

When interrogating older refugees from the mainland, this reporter has always asked about village populations. Considerable drops in populations have invariably been reported, and the standard explanation has been, "many have died and some have gone about village birth rates. Representing the average was a village, reported as having about 30 births per annum before the horrors of the "great leap," which had produced only four or five infants a year in the worst times, and had now increased output to the level of 20 babies per year. One cannot tell with certainty. but from such facts as these one would guess that the Chinese population actually fell in the worst years and may now be approximately stable. If so, that is a plus for Mao and company. On the other hand, there is a heavy minus in the fact that the official figures on Chinese farm output look as fishy as the popu-

This fragmentary evidence has now been supplemented by more highly organized interrogation

AROUSED CITIZEN-When the House voted deep cuts in the President's foreign aid money request recently, the action aroused at least one U.S. citizen to the point of anger at which he decided to do something about it per-

The man, a New Jersey resident., dashed off a letter to the President and enclosed a check for $100. His letter read:

"If my elected representatives will not vote sufficent funds for the program I will have to go over their heads and contribute the money directly. I see no point in being taxed for all kinds of programs of which I don't approve (including pork barrel projects which are voted by the same representatives who rail against foreign aid), and having those programs which I do support emasculated."

Needless to say the White House received the letter with a large amount of glee. But it still is going to reply on congressional restoration of the cut, rather than count on public contributions to make up the $600 million difference.

"FRAMED" - Sen. George Mc-Govern. D-S- D., is a former history professor. He is also a man who lives to re-arrange the decor of his office on Capitol Hill.

McGovern has decorated the walls of his office with photographs of some of the great presidents. But he likes to re-arrange them from time to time. He doesn't say so, but it is apparent that current Senate matters seem to have an effect on how Mc-Govern regards these greats of the past and he acts on this shifting emphasis by shifting the pictures.

The other evening, after a particularly long Senate session, Mc-Govern was apparently seized with the urge to re-arrange his idols. He must have gotten out his hammer and gone to work on the nails in the walls.

In any event, when his secretary arrived at work early the next morning, she found a note on her desk near a picture of President Woodrow Wilson on which the glass had been broken.

The note read: "Poor Wilson had his throat cut again tonight. I tried to rehang him. G. M."

Here, the fishiness is on the other side of the balance. Scientific interrogation has lately been used to determine grain yields per acre in the period before the Communists collectivized the land and the comparable yields today. Some inaccurary must be allowed for, but less than you might think, since every competent Chinese peasant knows the value of every square inch of land in his village. This interrogation showed postcollectivization decreases in per acre production that were never less than 50 per cent and sometimes reached 70 per cent. If these results are even halfway correct, current estimates of grain output must be much too high. Quite possibly, this error is being neatly canceled by estimates of *population that are also much too high.

In any case, there is nothing in the condition of the countryside to encourage any expectation of a gradual improvement of farm output, sufficient to provide the Chinese Communist system with the needed margin for recovery and growth. As the record shows, collectively organized agriculture is outrageously inefficient in the best of cases. In the case of China. whose entire agriculture is intensive to the point of resembling horticulture, the collective system far more damaging than in

In addition, there is a deep contradiction between the tiny private plots of the peasantry and the biggest need of all, which is to increase output on the vast majority of the land, and this the best land, which is still publicly controlled. All over China, the peasants are stealing from the public land all the work and all the manure they can possibly put into the private plots.

"Night soil quotas" are sternly exacted, but even so, since human manure plays such a major role in China, the private plots are probably depriving the public lands of a quarter of their normal fertilizer supply. In fact, it is a fair forecast that the trend will be down, not up, in which case there is no way out anywhere for China's present rulers.

Bosch's Story Meanwhile, I telephoned President Bosch in San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he has taken refuge following his overthrow. He said he had heard of Texaco's opposition to him but did not know how extensive it was.

Sons Of Italy These are days when many proud U. S. citizens of Italian origin cringe at the world "Valachi" and the roll call of Italian names which he has let drop before the Senate Investigating committee

Against this it should be remembered that the underworld once had its hardboiled native American leaders, later its Jack Guziks and Roger Touhys, and at one time the lost wanted criminal in the USA was a former Indiana Quaker farm boy, John Dillinger

Offset against the roll call of Sicilian criminals should be noted some of the great Italian names in American politics - Mayor Feonello of New York who pioneered better housing, new hospitals, and more schools, courageous John Pastore, Senator from Rhode Island! 12 Congressmen of Italian descent who are among the ablest in the House of Representatives, and Albert Rosellini. governor of Washington State, who is president of the Governors' Conference.

At one time, four governors of the United States-Rosellini, Mike di Salle of Ohio, John Volpe of Massachusetts, and John Notte of Rhode Island - were of Italian descent. At present a man born in Italy is in the Cabinet, HEW Secretary Anthony Celebreeze, elected mayor of Cleveland longer than any other man in history. # Secrecy Industry

By John Crosby

LONDON

This is the great age of the spy. "Tiptoeing through the pages of the Denning Report is the most mysterious character of all, known as the Director-General of the Security Service," writes Anthony Sampson in the Observer. "More simply he is head of MI-5, the chief spy-catcher. Journalists are forbidden to mention his name and we must therefore call him

Everyone knows his name except, of course, ordinary people. The Russians certainly know who he is. So do the Red Chinese. So does everyone whom he is supposed to be a secret from. It's only the annoying people like journalists and constituents and members of Parliament and others who ask bothersome questions who are kept well in the dark in these matters.

The opposite number of MI-5 in the United States is the FBI, whose head, J. Edgar Hoover, is probably the greatest publicity hound on earth. But the activities of the FBI, like those of MI-5, are cloaked in secrecy. The question must arise: Whom are they keeping the secrets from - the Russians? Or the taxpayers?

Secrecy is a marvelous disguise for cloak-and-dagger operations. It's even better to conceal muddle. In Britain a whole long line of spies from Burgess and MacLean through Vassall have operated in relative impunity before word leaked out, leading to the suspicion that there are mobs of spies operating who haven't been caught yet.

But with all the secrecy, we'll never know, will we? Until the next Philby defects. The FBI files are the most sacrosant of all secret matter. In fact, they're a secret to the FBI itself. The FBI had in its files a good deal about Klaus Fuchs and the fact that he was a security risk years before the British caught him handing out secrets to the Russians. That's the ultimate in secrecy - to keep it a secret from your own organization. But, of course, the FBI has a staggering amount in its files. Anyone can wander in to FBI headquarters and give information about anyone else, and it lands in the files. How is one supposed to find anything in that mess? Our CIA, a comparatively recent organization, is now composed of acres and acres of secrecy, miles of secrets, corridors of secrets, thousands of filing cabinets jammed full of secrecy. How on earth is anyone supposed to find anything when there's so much? The great difficulty in modern espionage is not squirreling the stuff out of Russia but putting your finger on it when you need it. Our espionage and counterespionage services are in constant danger of drowning in the sheer quantities of their data. The Russians have security services that are secret from each other. We don't have that problem. Everyone knows where the CIA is, who's the boss, and in fact, the Washington mob knows pretty well who the hired hands are and even sometimes what they're doing. But why are they doing it? Ah, that is the question! Some of the activities of the CIA in Cuba before Castro took over or in Viet Nam right now or in Turkey a few years ago-well, thank God for secrecy.

There is more espionage going on today than at any other time in history by the U.S. and by everyone else, and heavens, the mistakes, the stupidity, the crookedness, the double-dealing, the knavery that is being splendidly concealed under the name of sec-

The fault for some of this I think lies deep in our nature. Life is so complicated that the average taxpaver is peculiarly prone to secrecy, secret agents, secret services, and all the rest of this malarkey-because then he doesn't have to understand it.

"Is it too much for this great and rich country to set aside 0.007 per cent of its gross national product to the welfare of the less fortunate inhabitants of our world in these times?" asked Rep. Particularly objectionable is the establishment of a two per cent minimum interest rate on all development loans in place of the present rate of three-quarters of one per cent. This will place the heaviest burden on the poorest countries least able to assume it. We are pleased that Representative Mathias voted against reduc-

Macmillan The Unflappable

A scant four months ago headlines in the British press declared Prime Minister Harold MacMillan a political martyr.

They reckoned without Macmillan's confidence, shrewdness, and political skill. Also his unwillingness, as he put it himself, to be cast out of office by "a pair of tarts." Indeed, judging by the warm response evidenced in his recent mail, Macmillan seems not to have been hurt personally at all by the Profumo-Ward-Keeler scandal. So he faces the annual convention of his Conservative Party, meeting Wednesday at Blackpool, in quite firm command.

The 13-year Tory rule in Britain is something of a miracle, and the secret of that miracle appears to be the instinct for political survival of Harold Macmillan. Taking over after the fiasco of Suez in 1956, he rebuilt the Conservative forces to win their third successive election in 1959 with an increased Parliamentary majority, a feat unprecedented in British political his-

When the Profumo farrago cracked open last summer, disaster seemed at last to have caught up with the sad-faced man with the wattles and the drooping mustache. Macmillan's administration had been bedeviled by venery slum profiteering, espionage, defection, prostitution, sexual perversion. The economy had been stagnant. Unemployment was chronic. The British press and public appeared fed up.

Now the economic reports are favorable a boomlet appears in the making. And despite rude shocks to the Conservatives in recent byelections, Labor's lead in the Gallup and Daily Express polls has been cut considerably - in the first from 181/2 to 131/2 per cent, in the second from 20 to 14½ per cent.

Macmillan's government is entitled to stay in office until October 1964. With the Laborites so far out in front, Macmillan would be unwise to call an election this year. But things could change considerably before the autumn of next

A Man In Trouble

When Khrushchev talks to the West, either by himself or through mouthpieces like Gromyko, the words are subject to all sorts of discount. This is why East-West "dialogues" are usually so profitless. But when the boss of the Kremlin talks to his own people the West can really get a clue to what is going on in that mysterious world behind the Iron Curtain.

This column has consistently held that Khrushchev is currently in such trouble internally that it should be the Number One priority of our diplomacy to get concessions from him while the getting is good. Of course, I haven't been to Soviet Russia, and I have doubted in the past that I would be welcome to a visa. So my opinion has little effect on professional Kremlinologists. Mut even without travelling in Russia it is still possible to get a picture of its troubles by putting together Khrushchev's various jollifications, harangues, importunings and diatribes as ne travels about his own empire.

With all respect to the professional Kremlinologists, they are not very good at putting together Khrushchev's own words to his own people. So let's try to paint a perspective-picture based on some recent Khrushchev statements that have been monitored by various eavesdroppers.

The most important Khrushchev statement of recent months was made to the workers in a tractor plant on August 22 in Yugoslivia. "Mass production," so Khrushchev told the Yugoslavs, "will be decisive. The system that produces the most will win. We must outproduce the capitalist countries. We in the Soviet Union can organize on the basis of mass production. Yugoslavia cannot do it. Bulgaria cannot do it. Czechoslovakia cannot do it, nor the Poles. Only the Soviet Union and China can do it. We can organize anything on an assembly-line basis."

What this speech would seem to be saying is that Khrushchev doesn't think his empire is ready for military war, just yet. There is, first, the question of mass production organization to settle. But please, so he seems to be importuning the people of Yugoslavia and the East European satellite countries, please, please, please don't be difficult while the Soviet is busy getting its assembly lines working.

Since "only the Soviet Union and China" are capable of mass production, there isn't any point in exporting Soviet machine tools to Poland or Hungary. Let them patiently raise cabbages and wait.

But when Khrushchev told the Yugoslav workers that the East European nations must leave it to Russia to organize for mass production, he did not mean to imply that he was finding it easy to plan for effective Soviet assembly lines. Talking to a group of industrial managers in Moscow, Khrushchev had already lamented the difficulties he was having in trying to pound sense into his party economic officials. "There was a time." so Khrushchev said, "when the power of a state was measured in terms of the amount of steel it could produce . . . But now, when there are other materials competing with steel, such a criterion is no . Some planners have put on 'steel blinkers' and now look and act as they were once taught. We now have a material that surpasses steel and costs less, and they still cry 'Steel. Steel!

In other words, Khrushchev was saying that top-down planning of an assembly-line civilization just doesn't get around to solving its problems forehandedly. Wearing their "steel blinkers," the Soviet planners had let the plastics and aluminum technicians and capitalists of the West steal a number of marches on the Russians. So there will be a mad rush in the Soviet Union to catch up in plastics like polypropylene, and in the reduction of bauxite to aluminum ingots.

But how fast can the plastics "catch-up" go when Soviet agriculture demands planning priorities? Speaking to his peasants, Khrushchev recently berated them for not listening to the "growl of thunder." Then he promised them more chemical fertilizers and more irrigation. All this in practically the same sentence in which he admitted the difficulty of solving both the fertilizer problem and the irrigation pipe problem at

Texaco Representative Accused Of Aiding Dominican Revolution

WASHINGTON — A charge that Texaco conspired with the Dominican Army through its Dominican representative, Duane D. Luther, to throw out President Juan Bosch was made behind the closed doors of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore.

Morse demanded that U.S. Ambassador John B. Martin and Assistant Secretary of State Ed Martin come up to the Senate committee to answer this and other questions regarding the Dominican revolution and the rising tide of military revolt in Latin

Luther is an ex-OSS officer who actively supported the political opponentof President Bosch, Viriavo Fiallo. Sen. Morse asked whether it was not true that the Texaco representative had contributed $2,500 toward the campaign expenses of Faillo and had later conspired to get Bosch out when the Texaco candidate was Ambassador Martin replied that he had met Luther socially but that it was apparent from the start that they did not see eye to eye on American policy. Luther made it clear that he was opposed to U.S. policy in the Dominican Republic and showed considerable hostility.

This made it awkward for the ambassador ot be in contact with Luther. Therefore he said he was unable to testify whether Luther

Sons Of Italy These are days when many proud U. S. citizens of Italian origin cringe at the world "Valachi" and the roll call of Italian names which he has let drop before the Senate Investigating committee

Against this it should be remembered that the underworld once had its hardboiled native American leaders, later its Jack Guziks and Roger Touhys, and at one time the lost wanted criminal in the USA was a former Indiana Quaker farm boy, John Dillinger.

Offset against the roll call of Sicilian criminals should be noted some of the great Italian names in American politics - Mayor Feonello of New York who pioneered better housing, new hospitals, and more schools, courageous John Pastore, Senator from Rhode Island! 12 Congressmen of Italian descent who are among the ablest in the House of Representatives, and Albert Rosellini, governor of Washington State, who is president of the Governors' Conference.

At one time, four governors of the United States-Rosellini, Mike di Salle of Ohio, John Volpe of Massachusetts, and John Notte of Rhode Island - were of Italian descent. At present a man born in Italy is in the Cabinet, HEW Secretary Anthony Celebreeze, elected mayor of Cleveland longer than any other man in history. LONDON

This is the great age of the spy. Tiptoeing through the pages of the Denning Report is the most mysterious character of all, known as the Director-General of the Security Service," writes Anthony Sampson in the Observer. "More simply he is head of MI-5, the chief spy-catcher. Journalists are forbidden to mention his name and we must therefore call him

Everyone knows his name except, of course, ordinary people. The Russians certainly know who he is. So do the Red Chinese. So does everyone whom he is supposed to be a secret from. It's only the annoying people like iournalists and constituents and members of Parliament and others who ask bothersome questions who are kept well in the dark in these matters.

The opposite number of MI-5 in the United States is the FBI. whose head, J. Edgar Hoover, is probably the greatest publicity hound on earth. But the activities of the FBI, like those of MI-5, are cloaked in secrecy. The question must arise: Whom are they keeping the secrets from - the Russians? Or the taxpayers?

Secrecy is a marvelous disguise for cloak-and-dagger operations. It's even better to conceal muddle. In Britain a whole long line of spies from Burgess and MacLean through Vassall have operated in relative impunity before word leaked out, leading to the suspicion that there are mobs of spies operating who haven't been caught yet.

But with all the secrecy, we'll never know, will we? Until the next Philby defects. The FBI files are the most sacrosant of all secret matter. In fact, they're a secret to the FBI itself. The FBI had in its files a good deal about Klaus Fuchs and the fact that he the ultimate in secrecy - to keep

But, of course, the FBI has a staggering amount in its files, Anyone can wander in to FBI headquarters and give information about anyone else, and it lands in the files.

How is one supposed to find anything in that mess? Our CIA, a comparatively recent organization, is now composed of acres and acres of secrecy, miles of secrets, corridors of secrets, thousands of filing cabinets jammed full of secrecy. How on earth is anyone supposed to find anything when there's so much? The great difficulty in modern espionage is not squirreling the stuff out of Russia but putting your finger on it when you need it. Our espionage and counterespionage services are in constant danger of drowning in the sheer quantities of their data.

The Russians have security services that are secret from each other. We don't have that problem. Everyone knows where the CIA is, who's the boss, and in fact, the Washington mob knows pretty well who the hired hands are and even sometimes what they're doing. But why are they doing it? Ah, that is the question! Some of the activities of the CIA in Cuba before Castro took over or in Viet Nam right now or in Turkey a few years ago-well, thank God for secrecy.

There is more espionage going on today than at any other time in history by the U.S. and by everyone else, and heavens, the mistakes, the stupidity, the crookedness, the double-dealing, the knavery that is being splendidly

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Crane Topples, Oakland Man Is Killed

Robert F. Sebold, 38, Pinned Under Wreck

Robert Francis Sebold, 38, of Oakland, an employe of the State Roads Commission for the past 13 years, was killed yesterday morning when a crane he was operating toppled over in a river dredging project near Mountain Lake Park

John D. Bushby, engineer of District 16 of the SRC said the man was dredging the bed of the Little Youghiogheny River just east of Mountain Lake Park on Maryland Route 135.

He said the accident occurred about 9:25 a.m. Mr. Bushby, who investigated the fatal accident, said the victim had picked up a load in a clam bucket and when he swung the machine around it toppled over on him.

Mr. Sebold was pinned under the wreckage for about 25 minutes, according to Mr. Bushby, who said a large truck and grader were used to raise the crane from the man's body.

The coroner was called and an autopsy was performed at the Garrett County Memorial Hospital in Oak and. The accident, according to Mr. Bushby, occurred just east of the Post Office in Mountain Lake Park.

A native of McHenry, Mr. Se bold was born on April 22, 1925, and was a son of Elizabeth (Mc-Gettigan) Sebold of McHenry and the late Joseph F. Sebold who died three weeks ago.

Besides his mother, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bernice (Cannon) Sebold; two daughters, The Cumberland Fire Depart-Diana Marie and Marsha Lynn, ment conducted fire drills and inand Paul Sebold, of McHenry.

Crane Topples, Oakland Man Is Killed

Robert F. Sebold, 38, Pinned Under Wreck

Robert Francis Sebold, 38, of Oakland, an employe of the State Roads Commission for the past 13 years, was killed yesterday morning when a crane he was operating toppled over in a river dredging project near Mountain Lake Park.

John D. Bushby, engineer of District 16 of the SRC said the man was dredging the bed of the Little Youghiogheny River just east of Mountain Lake Park on Maryland Route 135.

He said the accident occurred about 9:25 a.m. Mr. Bushby, who investigated the fatal accident, said the victim had picked up a load in a clam bucket and when he swung the machine around it toppled over on him.

Mr. Sebold was pinned under the wreckage for about 25 minutes, according to Mr. Bushby, who said a large truck and grader were used to raise the crane from the man's body.

The coroner was called and an autopsy was performed at the Garrett County Memorial Hospital in Oakland, The accident, according to Mr. Bushby, occurred just east of the Post Office in Mountain Lake Park.

A native of McHenry, Mr. Sebold was born on April 22, 1925, and was a son of Elizabeth (Mc-Gettigan) Sebold of McHenry and the late Joseph F. Sebold who died three weeks ago.
